I am writing to whom it may concern to inform them that Jeffrey-Angelo Construction Company built my 7000 square foot house last year. I had entered into a contract with Mr. Jeffrey Folino of Jeffrey-Angelo Construction that was set up in many ways as a commercial project. The paper work commitment was more demanding than in the usual residential construction project. Be that as it may there were many verbal agreements during the course of construction that had no paper trail, but they were honored by both sides. There were several changes that I asked Mr. Folino to make after he had completed what was in the original blueprints, and he always did exactly what I, the home owner, asked for. Mr. Folino's answer was always, "Whatever you want." I also knew that any change I would ask for would usually include an extra expense, which was always estimated at least verbally, if not on paper, before he went ahead with the change. He always made sure that the construction was as sound as could be, above and beyond what codes would call for, often at his own expense. My house could withstand a hurricane. We have had hurricane strength winds with driving rains since the house was completed, and not one drop of water got into the house... no leaks!

Jeffrey Folino put his heart and soul into his work. The construction project was an extension of himself, and that showed in the excellent quality of his work. During the construction I showed off the project to all my visiting friends and relatives. My father and my brother were among them. My father was a carpenter/contractor for thirty-five years, and my brother worked for him on many projects. My brother is still involved in construction in Michigan. When he saw the work that Mr. Folino was doing in its framing stage, my brother's comment was, "I haven't seen this top quality of work since Dad's. This guy is a class act." I have found that comment to be true throughout the entire project. My father, too, was very pleased with Mr. Folino's work. His comments included labeling Mr. Folino as an artist and an engineer.

Throughout the entire construction project, I have found Mr. Folino to be honest and dedicated to making the home owners happy with their new home. He would follow the instructions outlined on the blueprints unless otherwise instructed by me. He supervised all his sub-contractors to insure that they were doing top quality work. I would highly recommend Jeffrey-Angelo Construction Company to anyone in the market for home construction of any kind. He takes good care of the building; he is there every day to check on it no matter what the weather or what holiday it may be. He is always available to the home owner to answer any questions, and he always asks the home owners if they are happy with what is there before proceeding. The best interest of the project and home owners were always his priority.

Yours truly,
